Experience Brainstorming Worksheet

Directions: Fill out each of the sections below. This will help you to brainstorm ways that you can begin to build some basic technology experience that can be listed on a resume and presented to an employer, and hopefully will uncover some opportunities that are around you now. Don't worry about how you can make these things happen – just list the ideas quickly without immediately judging them.

Who Do I Know?	List anyone around you or that you interact with, including family, friends, neighbors, co-workers and friends of family.
What Groups Am I Associated With?	List any groups you're involved in, including religious affiliations, volunteering, clubs and activities.
What Technology Could I Help Them With?	Considering the people and groups listed above, list what technology they use that they may need assistance with, such as cell phones, Wi-Fi, computer setup and training.
What Non-Profits Are in My Area?	List any non-profit organizations in your area that you are familiar with, or that you someone you know is associated with.
How Could I Volunteer?	List ways that you may be able to assist the non-profits you listed above with technology, including training, computer updates, or assisting their clients.
Who Do I Know That Works in Cybersecurity?	List anyone you know or know of that works in the field of cybersecurity.
